INTERVIEWING

Tips & Strategies

Visit the online version of this guide to access hyperlinks.
BEFORE THE INTERVIEW

A job interview is an opportunity to showcase your strengths, experience, and interest in the position for which you’re applying. An interview is also a chance for you to ask questions of the employer and find out if the position is a good fit for you. The secret to a successful interview is thorough preparation and effective communication.

Before the Interview Checklist

- Know what you have to offer. Employers desire employees who are self-aware and able to communicate clearly about what they have to offer. After reflecting on your diverse experiences, what have you learned and how does this relate to the position for which you’re applying? Write down specific examples that would illustrate your match for the job description. Study your résumé and be prepared to articulately describe the transferability of all experiences listed.

- Know the position. If you have not been given a position description, request one from the organization. What specific qualifications are they seeking? What particular strengths are they looking for in a candidate? Do you possess these? If so, make sure you highlight this during the interview.

- Know the organization. Do your research! Spend time exploring the organization’s website and/or informational literature. What is the organization proud of? What is their mission/vision statement? What is the primary population they serve? Follow them on Twitter and LinkedIn. Employers will expect you to know some background information on their organization, so be ready.

- Know your interviewing strengths and weaknesses. Take advantage of the Mock Interview service through the Career Center. A career coach will ask you a list of interview questions and provide you with feedback on your strengths and suggested areas for improvement. Don’t let your first interview experience be with the actual interviewing committee – practice on us!

FIRST IMPRESSIONS MATTER

First impressions are critical. To make a positive first impression, pay attention to the following tips:

- Arrival Time. You should arrive at your interviewing destination approximately 10-15 minutes early. This should give you some time to organize your thoughts and observe the working environment.

- Cell Phones. Remember to turn off all electronic devices or don’t bring them at all.

- Professional Dress and Behavior. For most organizations, typical interview attire includes a well-tailored professional suit; however, it can be helpful to find out what’s most appropriate from someone working in the field. Avoid overdoing accessories, makeup, cologne or perfume. Dress in neutral tones. Professionalism is more than dress; it’s how you present yourself.

- Firm handshake. Always extend a firm handshake to your interviewers. It speaks volumes!

- Eye contact. This shows confidence and engages the interviewer throughout the process.

- Smile. Attitude matters! You want to come across as enthusiastic, friendly and approachable. Avoid negativity – both verbal and nonverbal.
DURING THE INTERVIEW

What to Bring with You
- Extra copies of your résumé (on professional résumé paper)
- A typed list of at least 3 references (also on résumé paper)
- Approximately 8-10 typed questions you would like to ask of your interviewer(s)
- A professional-style padfolio that contains a pen and paper

Interviewing Tips
- Make sure your answers are articulate, concise and clearly related to the position description/organization.
- Pay attention to your non-verbal cues. Are you conveying professionalism?
- Answer the interviewer’s questions using specific examples from past experiences. Point out transferable skills. Even if the interviewer asks a simple yes/no question, be sure to expand with specific examples.
- Convey your strengths which relate to the position.
- Avoid talking too much or getting off track on tangents.
- When addressing weaknesses, be sure to communicate how you are working to overcome them. Think of weaknesses associated with your personality type (contact the Career Center for more info on this).
- Remember that it’s okay to take a moment to think rather than blurring something out prematurely.
- Be aware of the experiences listed on your résumé. Many interviewers ask questions specifically related to this information.
- Always ask questions of your interviewer(s) at the end. Avoid asking questions related to salary or benefits during a first interview. Research average salaries for the position prior to the interview, in case you’re asked about this.
- Remember to write down the names, positions and contact information of your interviewers or request their business cards so that you can follow up appropriately with a thank-you note.

BEHAVIORAL-BASED INTERVIEWING

Behavioral-based interviewing is a style most commonly used by interviewers. According to Katherine Hansen of Quintessential Careers, “The premise behind behavioral interviewing is that the most accurate predictor of future performance is past performance in similar situations...Employers use the behavioral interview technique to evaluate a candidate’s experiences and behaviors so they can determine the applicant’s potential for success.” Behavioral-based questions typically start out with “Tell me about a time when you...” or “Describe a situation where you...”

Common mistakes job candidates make during interviews, based on a global recruiter survey.
- Talking too much
- Lack of knowledge about company or position
- Over-inflated ego
- Appearing overly confident
- Inquiring about compensation too early in the process
- Unkempt appearance

Source: Wall Street Journal
Behavioral-based questions are often related to skills such as innovation and creativity, teamwork, decision-making, critical thinking, conflict management, leadership, flexibility, communication and motivation. These skills can be developed through a variety of experiences – directly or indirectly related to the position; from paid or non-paid experiences.

Preparation is the key to successfully answering behavioral-based questions. Try using the following strategies to help you organize your past experiences (also known as “stories”) as potential examples.

☐ Make a list of skills or experiences which are relevant or transferable to the position being sought. Review any materials from the employer to help you identify these desired skills and experiences (job description, website, company reports, research, etc.).

☐ Think about situations in which you’ve utilized the desired skills. Come up with 10 - 15 stories from college, class projects, jobs, internships, volunteer activities, club involvement/leadership and hobbies. Think also of situations that did not go as planned or were difficult but turned out to be a learning experience.

☐ Practice telling your examples to others, such as friends and family, or a career coach.

☐ Make sure your examples are concise, well-told, and interesting. They should create word pictures of what you have done, learned or accomplished that relate to the job for which you are interviewing.

☐ Don’t hesitate to market your accomplishments; this is not the time to be too modest!

☐ Be aware of nonsense questions (also commonly called off the wall questions), such as “if you could be anyone in the world who would you be?”, etc. Though these questions may seem odd, they do have purpose. Interviewers may want to see if you have a sense of humor, or determine how well you can think on your feet, respond to pressure, or handle an unusual situation. While there is no true way to prepare for these types of questions, you can excel at answering them by not appearing rattled, and providing an honest response that is not too “abnormal” in nature.
THE S.T.A.R. STRATEGY

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SITUATION</th>
<th>★</th>
<th>TASK</th>
<th>★</th>
<th>ACTION</th>
<th>★</th>
<th>RESULTS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

The objective here is to think of anecdotes or concise examples that illustrate the skills and competencies associated with the position for which you’re interviewing. The STAR strategy helps to organize your stories and examples.

Situation
- What was the situation?
- What problems or challenges did I face?
- What was the context in which this situation occurred?

Task
- What was my role?

Action
- What did I do specifically?
- What skills did I utilize?

Results
- What were the outcomes/accomplishments?
- What were the unintended outcomes?
- What did I learn?
- What would I do differently next time?

Additional Interview Styles (From “You’ve Graduated, Now What?”)

Telephone Screening / Skype Interviews:
- Used when a company is considering you for a full round of interviews or when companies want to screen people quickly. Also can be used when the candidate is unable to interview in person for various reasons. In five minutes, the interviewer can often determine whether an in-person interview will be necessary.
- Enthusiasm is the key. Smile when you talk into the phone or towards the computer screen (it makes a difference!).
- Make sure you are in a quiet room with no distractions. Turn off all cell phones, music, or other outside noises. If you are Skyping, be cognizant of what the interviewer will be able to see in your background (silly posters, messy closets, a glare off a window, etc. are all things to avoid).
- Dress in your interview attire. You may feel a bit silly, especially in the case of a phone interview, but this technique works! You will look, feel, and sound more professional.

Non-directed Interviews:
- Rely on traditional, sometimes random questions - “Tell me about yourself” and “What are your career goals?”
• Remember that while you do not control the direction of the interview, you do control the content.
• Remain focused, share stories of skills and experience, and project enthusiasm.

Stress Interviews:
• Creates stress through questioning and situations to reveal how you may handle stress on the job.
• Examples include “rapid fire” questioning (little time to think) or using silence—the interviewer silently looks at you after you answer a question to see your reaction. If you get flustered or defensive, you lose.
• The interviewer may comment that you do not have enough experience. Your reaction is critical.
• Once you realize that the interviewer is deliberately putting you under stress, say (to yourself), “Aha, I know what you’re doing, and I’m not going to panic or get angry or become defensive.”

Board Interviews:
• Two or more people interview you simultaneously, usually taking turns in questioning.
• Each interviewer may have his/her own separate agenda and the only person really listening to your answer may be the person who asked the question.
• Make eye contact with each of the interviewers at the table.

Series Interviews:
• Consecutive interviews (in one day) with several people in an organization. You may interview with someone from personnel, your potential boss, and some potential colleagues both inside and outside the department.
• Assumes several heads are always better than one. Combined, they see qualities that would make a candidate suitable or unsuitable for the position and come to agreement on the strongest candidates.

AFTER THE INTERVIEW

It’s not over yet! Be sure to send a thank-you note within two business days to each of your interviewers. This is a chance for you to thank them for taking the time to interview you and to restate your interest in the position. You may want to reiterate something that was discussed during the interview. This will demonstrate to the interviewer that you were listening carefully.

Thank-you notes can be in the form of a handwritten professional-looking thank-you card or a well-crafted email. If you are no longer interested in the position, you still should send a thank-you, but alert them to the fact that you would like to be eliminated from the candidate pool. For more information, as well as some sample thank you notes, visit the Career Center’s website.
Unless the employer specifically requests that you do not call or write following an interview, consider following up with a phone call 1-2 weeks after the interview. Reiterate your interest, inquire about their hiring timeline if this wasn’t already discussed, and ask if they need anything further from you.

GENERAL INTERVIEW QUESTIONS

Below are sample interview questions for you to practice. Note that not all of these questions will be asked, and you are likely to have additional questions which are directly related to the field or position.

- Tell me about yourself.
- What are your long-range goals and objectives?
- What are the most important rewards you expect in your career?
- Why did you choose the career for which you are preparing?
- What are your strengths, weaknesses, and interests?
- How do you think a friend or professor who knows you well would describe you?
- Describe a situation in which you had to work with a difficult person (student, co-worker, customer, supervisor, etc.). How did you handle the situation? Is there anything you would have done differently in hindsight?
- What motivates you to put forth your greatest effort? Describe a situation in which you did so.
- In what ways have your college experiences prepared you for a career?
- How do you determine or evaluate success?
- In what ways do you think you can make a contribution to our organization?
- Describe a contribution you have made to a project on which you worked.
- What two or three accomplishments have given you the most satisfaction? Why?
- Describe your most rewarding college experience.
- What interests you about our product or service?
- Why did you select your college or university?
- What led you to choose your major or field of study?
- What college subjects did you like best? Why?
- What college subjects did you like least? Why?
- What have you learned from participation in extracurricular activities?
- How do you work under pressure?
- Describe a situation in which you worked in a team. What role did you assume? What went well and what didn’t?
- How would you describe the ideal job for you following graduation?
- Why did you decide to seek a position with this organization?
- What do you know about our organization?
- What two or three things would be most important to you in your job?
- What criteria are you using to evaluate the organization for which you hope to work?
- Will you relocate? Does relocation bother you?
- Are you willing to spend at least six months as a trainee?
- What makes you a strong candidate for this position?
- If you were hiring a graduate for this position, what qualities would you look for?
POTENTIAL QUESTIONS TO ASK INTERVIEWERS

Do your homework. Don’t ask questions which you could have easily researched before the interview. However, prepare several questions in order to convey interest, maturity, and a grasp of the profession. Consider which of the following questions could be tailored to your prospective employer(s). Adapt content and style as appropriate. Remember to never ask about salary or benefits. This is only applicable if you are offered the position.

• What are the company's strengths and weaknesses compared to its competition?
• How important does upper management consider the function of this department/position?
• What is the organization's plan for the next five years, and how does this department fit in?
• Could you explain your organizational structure?
• How will my leadership responsibilities and performance be measured? By whom?
• What are the day-to-day responsibilities of this job?
• Do you provide any training for new hires?
• Could you describe your company's management style and the type of employee who fits well with it?
• What are some of the skills and abilities necessary for someone to succeed in this job?
• What is the company's policy on providing seminars, workshops, and training so employees can keep up their skills or acquire new ones?
• What particular computer equipment and software do you use?
• What kind of work can I expect to be doing the first year?
• What percentage of routine, detailed work will I encounter?
• How much opportunity is there to see the end result of my efforts?
• Who will review my performance? How often?
• How much guidance or assistance is made available to individuals in developing career goals?
• How much opportunity will I have for decision-making in my first assignment?
• Can you describe an ideal employee?
• What is your organization's policy on transfers to other cities?
• Do you encourage graduate study outside of work time? If so, does your organization offer incentives? (tuition reimbursement, for example)
• Why do you enjoy working for your firm?
• What makes your firm different from its competitors?
• How would you describe your corporation's personality and management style?