

Messiah University Murk-Hayes Endowed Award

Preface

This award is generated by the Teacher Education Program and named in honor of Dr. Don Murk and the late Steve Hayes. Dr. Murk served at Messiah College for 39 years, directing the Early Learning Center, serving as a faculty member and chair in the Education Department. Dr. Murk's passions for teaching included the Basic School model, especially its emphasis on building parent/school, and community relationships to support children in their learning. Dr. Murk became a strong advocate for the needs of children in urban, low income schools. Dr. Murk desired to honor his friend and colleague, Steve Hayes, through this award. Mr. Hayes served as a faculty member in the Education Department for 15 years at Messiah College; he especially loved reading and elementary education. Mr. Hayes also directed the S.T.A.R.T. program, extending from his deep commitment to educational access and equity. Mr. Hayes loved connecting with people and exhibited a pure joy in teaching.

The Murk-Hayes Endowed Award seeks to recognize a teacher certification candidate who has a demonstrated interest and capacity for serving K-12 educators in urban contexts. In the large majority of cases, this is an add-on award and will be added to, not substituted for, any financial aid the recipient already receives. The award is open to candidates of any Messiah University teacher certification program. The award will be divided in half and disbursed evenly in fall and spring during the senior year.

Urban schools are always in need of talented, passionate teachers who want to make a difference in the lives of their students. Sadly, the schools that need teachers the most are the ones that have the most difficulty finding teachers. Urban schools need dedicated educators who will remain committed to their students. The jobs exist, but many teachers are intimidated by the idea of working with limited resources, teaching in impoverished areas or leading overcrowded classes. The general conception of urban schools is that their lagging performance has to do with teachers who are not dedicated, as well as students facing a range of issues including truancy, inattentiveness, undiagnosed learning disabilities, language barriers and ill preparedness.

But a great teacher has a passion for teaching that can transcend these difficulties. Great teachers want to make a difference and are satisfied more by the impact they have on peoples' lives than the tangible rewards.

Why have you chosen to become an “urban educator?”

What will you bring to your students, and how will you deal with the inequalities of teaching in an urban setting?

Social justice is a concept of fair and just relations between the individual and society, as measured by the distribution of wealth, opportunities for personal activity, and social privileges. In Western as well as in older Asian cultures, the concept of social justice has often referred to the process of ensuring that individuals fulfill their societal roles and receive what was their due from society. In the current global grassroots movements for social justice, the emphasis has been on the breaking of barriers for social mobility, the creation of safety nets and economic justice.

Why and how will you teach for social justice?

Retention of the Award

If at any time a recipient falls below the award acceptance standards, the case will be referred to the Teacher Education Committee for possible withdrawal of the award.
